Vol. IV. No. II.

THE Madras Monthly JOURNAL, OR INDIA RECORDER: FOR FEBRUARY, 1807.

When Emulation sways the human breast,
  Each energy of GENIUS is called forth;
Daring, as when, from his high-mantel'd nest,
  The bird of Jove wings thro' the frozen north.
'Tis Competition, 'tis the thirst of Fame,
Which gild the Warrior's and the Statesman's name.
So when a Courser's train'd the Circus round,
With measur'd pace, he treads the well-mark'd ground;
Anon, behold, with some fleet steed he vies,
Fir'd with the glow for excellence, he flies,
Like a bright meteor thro' the vaulted skies!

TRAGEDY.

INSULTED INNOCENCE.

(Monimia, Castalio, Polydore, and the Page.)

Mon. He comes, the conqueror comes! be ſtill my heart,
And learn to bear thy injuries with ſcorn.
Caſt. Madam, my brother begs, he may have leave
To tell you ſomething that concerns you nearly.
I leave you, as becomes me, and withdraw.
Mon. My lord, Caſtalio!
Caſt. Madam?
Mon. Have you purpoſed
To abuſe me palbably? what means this uſage?
Why am I left with Polydore alone?
Caſt. He beſt can tell you. Buſineſs of importance
Calls me away; I muſt attend my father.
Mon. Will you then leave me thus?
Caſt. But for a moment.
Mon. It has been otherwiſe; the time has been,
When buſineſs might have ſtaid, and I been heard.
Caſt. I could for ever hear thee; but this time,
Matters of ſuch odd circumſtances preſs me,
That I muſt go.——— ——— [Exit.
Mon. Then go, and if 't be poſſible, for ever.
Well, my lord Polydore, I gueſs your buſineſs,
And read the 'ill natured purpoſe in your eyes.
Pol. If to deſire you more than miſer's wealth,
Or dying men an hour of added life;
If ſofteſt wiſhes, and a heart more true
Than ever ſuffer'd yet for love diſdain'd,
Speak an ill nature, you accuſe me juſtly.
Mon. Talk not of love, my Lord, I muſt not hear it.
Pol. 'Who can behold ſuch beauty and be ſilent?
Deſire firſt taugh us words. Man, when created,
At firſt alone long wander'd up and down,
Forlorn, and ſilent as his vaſſal beaſts;
But when a heav'n-born maid, like you, appear'd,
Strange pleaſures fill'd his eyes, and fir'd his heart,
Unlooſ'd his tongue—and his firſt talk was love.
Mon. The firſt created pair indeed were bleſs'd;
They were the only objects of each other,

Therefore he courted her, and her alone:
But in this peopled world of beauty, where
There's roving room, when you may court, and ruin
A thousand more, why need you talk to me?

Pol. Oh! I could talk to thee for ever. Thus Eternally admiring, fixt and gaze
On those dear eyes; for every glance they send Darts thro' my soul, and almost gives enjoyment.

Mon. How can you labour thus for my undoing!
I must confess, indeed, I owe you more
Than ever I can hope or think to pay.
There always was a friendship 'twixt our families;
And therefore, when my tender parents dy'd,
Whose ruin'd fortunes too expir'd with them,
Your father's pity and his bounty took me,
A poor and helpless orphan, to his care.

Pol. 'Twas Heav'n ordain'd it so, to make me happy.
Hence with this peevish virtue, 'tis a cheat,
And those who taught it first were hypocrites.
Come, these soft tender limbs were made for yielding.

Mon. Here on my knees, by Heav'n's blest power I swear, [kneels.

If you persist, I ne'er henceforth will see you.
But rather wander thro' the world a beggar,
And live on sordid scraps at proud men's doors;
For though to fortune lost, I'll still inherit
My mother's virtues and my father's honor.

Pol. Intolerable vanity! your Sex
Was never in the right! y'are always false
Or silly; ev'n your dresses are not more
Fantastic than your appetites; you think
Of nothing twice. Opinion you have none.
To-day y'are nice, to-morrow not so free;
Now smile, then frown, now sorrowful, then glad;
Now pleas'd, now not, and all you know not why!
Virtue you affect; inconstancy's your practice;
And when your loose desires once get dominion,
No hungry churl feeds coarser at a feast;
Ev'ry rank fool goes down ——

Mon. Indeed, my Lord,
I own my sex's follies; I have 'em all.
And, to avoid its fault, must fly from you.

Therefore, believe me, could you raise me high?
As most fantastic woman's wish could reach,
And lay all nature's riches at my feet;
I'd rather run a savage in the woods,
Amongst brute beasts, grow wrinkled and deform'd,
As wildness and most rude neglect could make me,
So I might still enjoy my honour safe
From the destroying wiles of faithless men! [Exit.

The ORPHAN; OR THE UNHAPPY MARRIAGE.
Act I. S. II.

WE have gone more at large into the above passage than we had at first designed; but however pleasing a variety of readings may prove, yet we are far from supposing, that a hasty mutilation of so much fine poetry could prove acceptable to the reader of true taste or solid discernment. However gratified we may feel by the dignity of thought, the harmony of expression, and the sublime appeal to the passions, with which the tragedy before us is so richly stored, yet we can never enough lament the deplorable indigence or apathy (perhaps both, for the latter often grows out of the former) which could lead the great OTWAY to pour forth his dramatic conceptions, with so little regard to the construction of the Fable.

The play before us carries not with it the remotest tendency to moral effect; is unbecomingly loose in expression; in a word, extremely faulty in its denouement and catastrophe—But such is the commanding power of genius, that here we must both lament and applaud! Such, indeed, is the fascinating predilection, which we cannot avoid conceiving for this ill-fated Poet, that the transcendency of his brilliant talents throws an oblivious veil over his mundane infirmities!

ROYAL SYMPATHY.

(Edward, the black Prince, and Arnold.)

Prince. How poor the pomps and trophies of the field,
The blaze of splendor, or that bubble, praise,
Compar'd with what the sympathizing heart
Feels from a gen'rous action!

— — — — — — — — — —
— — — — — — — — — —
— — — — — — — — — —

Arn. So honour'd, gracious prince, as I have been,
From humble fortune rais'd to envy'd greatness,

And ſtill with ev'ry grace each gift made precious.
Oh! what are words in payment of ſuch bleſſings!
What ev'n my life itſelf laid down,
In gratitude for ſuch tranſcendent goodneſs!
How ſhall I praiſe.—

Prince. Arnold, I merit none.
If thou haſt kindneſs done thee, I have pleaſure,
There is no joy a gen'rous mind can know,
Like that of giving merit its reward:
Nor ought ſuch payment be eſteem'd a bounty;
For to deſerve and give is equal favour.
" If there's a tranſport tow'ring to divine;
If,—in atonement for its load of cares—
One vaſt enjoyment is the gift of GREATNESS,
Tis—that we can beſtow where merit claim,
And with our favours cheer or charms the ſoul!

EDWARD THE BLACK PRINCE.
Act. I. S. I.

We have two much reſpect for the hearts and underſtandings of our readers, to attempt an elucidation of the ſeraphic ſentiment contained in the above lines, other than the liberty we have uſed, by making a ſmall tranſpoſition in the text, and by giving the moſt prominent verſes in Italics.

GOLDSMITH.

R.

Madras, Feb. 14, 1807.

Altho' we muſt be aware, that Miſs Hamilton's celebrated letters of a Hindoo Rajah are known to the generality of our Engliſh readers, yet, as it alſo becomes a part of our duty to cater for the leſs gratified appetites of a reſpectable portion of our Aſiatic Gueſts, ſo we truſt, this our laudable deſire, will not prove unacceptable, whilſt we ſubmit, occaſionally for their peruſal, a few detached paſſages from this pleaſing, moral and inſtructive performance to diffuſe intellectual gratification;

THE RAJAH'S CONCEPTION OF AN ENGLISH BALL.

I was invited by the Governor General himſelf, to a notch, or, as they expreſs it, a ball; which was to be given in the evening, in a houſe appropriated to that purpoſe. On enquiry, I found that the dancers were to be all Engliſh; a circumſtance that delighted me, as I have hitherto had no opportunity of ſeeing any of their females.

I waited with impatience for the hour which was to take us to the place appointed: but as neither Captain Grey, nor any of his friends, had the ſame degree of curioſity, the greater part of the company were aſſembled before we reached the room. When we entered it, amazement and delight took poſſeſſion of my ſoul. It is impoſſible to convey to you, by words, any idea of the beautiful objects that ſurrounded me: but you may judge of the tranſcendent power of their charms, when I tell you, that they ſhone forth with invincible luſtre, in ſpite of the deformity of a dreſs, which appears to have been invented by envy, with an intention of disfiguring the faireſt works of nature. Theſe lovely creatures, to the number of about one hundred, were ſeated on benches in the European faſhion, and ſmiled, and talked, to the gentlemen who addreſſed them, with great ſpirit, and vivacity: but this I did not wonder at; as I had been told by Grey, that they all either were, or, had been Dancers: and, you know, women of that profeſſion are ſeldom at a loſs for converſation.

The great man having entered, and received the compliments of the company after the manner of his nation, which conſiſts of very little ceremony, the dancing commenced. But judge of my aſtoniſhment, when I beheld the dancing girls led out—not by their maſters—but—debaſing meanneſs! each by an Engliſh Chief! Sincere as my reſpect for the Governor General certainly is, I could not reſtrain my indignation at ſeeing Chiefs, and military Commanders of high rank and authority, thus publicly degrading themſelves by dancing for his amuſement. How inconſiſtent, thought I, is the conduct of mortals! Theſe men, who plume themſelves upon their notions of liberty, and independence, ſubmit, without reluctance, to an indignity, to which the Omrahs of the empire, who, in the days of its greatneſs, ſurrounded the royal Muſmud, and proſtrated themſelves to ſalute the duſt, which was ſhaken from the feet of royalty, would ſooner have died than have ſubmitted! Though, on the part of the Engliſh Chiefs, it appeared entirely voluntary, yet I thought I could perceive that many of them felt ſufficient repugnance to this degrading buſineſs, which they went through with that ſort of heroic apathy and indifference, which you have beheld in a criminal of our nation when about to be hanged.* Indeed, I never ſaw a dance ſo very little amuſing. The geſtures of the women were as little graceful as their dreſs; and had it not been for the extreme beauty of their countenances, I confeſs, I ſhould ſoon have been tired with looking at them,

A gentleman, whom I had ſeen in the morning, told me, that his wife wiſhed to be introduced to me. The requeſt ſurpriſed me; but as I knew the gentleman to be a perſonage of high rank and character, I prepared to follow him. He conducted me to the oppoſite ſide of the room, and led me up to a group of Bibbys, whom I had miſtaken for ſuperannuated dancing girls, but whom I now, to my infinite aſtoniſhment, diſcovered to be the wives of men of rank and eminence, whoſe names, according to the cuſtom of their country, they bore. I could not find myſelf in the preſence of theſe ladies without experiencing a conſiderable degree of embarraſſment; this was by no means the caſe with them; like other females, they all ſpoke at once, and ſeemed endowed with much loquacity. They looked at me with ſteady countenances, totally void of that modeſt timidity, which is the moſt ineſtimable gem in female beauty. That glare of colouring, which, at firſt ſight, caught my ſoul in the net of aſtoniſhment, loſt, by degrees, its power of enchantment. And as the nightingale*, after having viewed, with ſhort-lived rapture, the ſplendour of the gaudy tulip, returns with freſh delight to the contemplation of his beloved roſe; ſo did my ſoul, in the midſt of this blaze of weſtern beauty, turn to the remembrance of the gentle graces, and endearing charms of my beloved Prymaveda! The lovelineſs of eyes, ſparkling in beauty, may attract our admiration, but the bare recollection of thoſe which beamed with the ſoftneſs of tender affection, is yet more precious to the ſoul!

Loſt in theſe reflections, I became inſenſible to the ſcene around me; and incommoded by the extreme heat of the room, I took the firſt opportunity of departing. The green horſes of Surraya had ſeen me perform my morning ablutions in the ſacred ſtream, before my friend Grey returned from this nocturnal feſtival.

Shall ignorance be for ever leading me into error? And ſhall experience never be able to defend me againſt the dangers of miſconception, and miſtake? I this morning accompanied Captain Grey into the country, in an open vehicle, called a Buggy, drawn by one horſe, which he himſelf drove. It was the firſt opportunity we had for converſation, ſince the Governor's notch; and he was anxious to know my opinion of it. 'What do you think of the ladies,' cried he; 'did you not think ſome of them very beautiful?' I anſwered, 'that as to beauty, I muſt confeſs, I thought the ladies had but a ſlender ſhare in every reſpect, bloom only excepted, compared to that which adorned the dancing girls; they, indeed, were beautiful!' ''Tis them I mean,' returned he; 'you do not think I could expect you to admire the old painted witches, to whom —— introduced you?' 'I could never have thought of giving the appelation of ladies to dancing girls,' returned I, gravely.' 'Dancing girls!' repeated he, burſting into a fit of laughter, 'Why the ladies, whom you ſaw dance, were, many of them, married ladies, of rank and diſtinction; the lovely Mrs. * * *, and her ſtill more lovely ſiſter, were of the number,' 'Is it poſſible,' cried I, 'that men of rank can baſely contaminate their honour, by ſuffering their wives and daughters to ſtoop to the degrading employment of dancers to the G. G—'. 'Why,' returned Grey, almoſt ſuffocated with laughter, 'do you imagine they danced to pleaſe him?' 'Whom ſhould you dance to pleaſe, but him,' rejoined I, peeviſhly, a little picqued by the exceſs of his mirth. 'Forgive me, dear Zaarmilla,' returned my companion; 'I confeſs nothing could be more natural than your miſtake: I certainly ought to have informed you, that dancing is a favourite amuſement in Europe; it forms part of the education of both ſexes, and to dance gracefully, is an accompliſhment on which women are taught to ſet a very high value: nor is it without reaſon that it is thus eſteemed, for nothing ſets off the charms of a fine woman to greater advantage. 'Did you not remark the young lady in the blue and ſilver?' continued he, 'The elegance of her figure, the gracefulneſs of her motions, the animation that ſparkled in her eye, and the ſenſibility that glowed in her countenance. Never did—' but here a ſudden ſtop was put to the harangue: in the vehemence of his diſcription, my friend had neglected the management of the reins; the wheels of the carriage were intercepted by the ſtump of a decayed tree, and the horſe, impatient of the interruption, began to fret, and rear, till the love pierced charioteer, applying his whip to the unfortunate animal, forced him to make a ſudden ſpring, which at once extricated him from confinement, and broke the carriage to pieces. We were both thrown to a conſiderable diſtance, and though neither of us received any material injury, we were ſufficiently bruiſed to make us remember the lady in the blue and ſilver for ſome days to come.

* This ſimile, the Rajah ſeems to have borrowed from the Perſian. Of all the poetical fables of the Eaſt, none is ſo frequently alluded to, in the compoſitions of the Perſian writers, as that which ſuppoſes the nightingale to be violently enamoured with the roſe.

Mr. Cobbett.

This celebrated writer, has manifested on all great occasions so disinterested, and zealous a regard for the public welfare, that no man of liberal feelings can read his political confessional, here subjoined, without a warm admiration of that strong, and independent mind, from which it so evidently flows :—

"Ten years have I now been a public writer. During the whole of that time have I been, to the best of my judgment, labouring for the welfare, and the honor of England, and, thereby, hoping to lay the foundation of fair, and permanent fame; and never have I, in any one instance that I can recollect, been tempted by my pressing, and accumulated difficulties, and distresses, to yield one particle of that independence of mind, which, as it was my birth-right, it behoves me never to part with. In my personal intercourse with public men, an intercourse never sought by me, I have acted upon the principles that I have always professed. In no case was I ever an intruder. Encouragement, and kindness never rendered me forward or familiar; but whilst towards birth, and station, I have constantly, and strictly observed, as well in my address, as in the whole of my demeanour, that respect which I have held to be due to the persons whom I have approached, I have, with regard to the exercise of my judgment, and the expression of my opinion, been as free as if I were still amongst my companions of the green. By halves I never love, or hate; and therefore, any circumstance that would sever me from those whose friendship I have so highly valued, could not fail to be severely felt, and deeply lamented. But I must, at the same time, feel that something is due to myself; to my own character and weight in the country: this, indeed, I may have far over estimated, but by that estimate, whatever it may be, my conduct must be swayed; and if there be any persons who regard this estimate, as beyond all the bounds of modesty, and of justice; who looking back at the humbleness of my origin, and of my progress from the ranks of the army onwards through a Bookseller's shop to the Editorship of a Newspaper, think that I bear a mind formed for nothing but servitude; who from the habit of estimating the pretensions of men by the length of their purse, the mode of their garments, and the grace of their bow, have inferred that my pretensions extend not beyond a sufficiency of food, and of raiment, who considering a Newspaper as an article of commerce, and as the means of obtaining not only victuals, and drink, and clothing, but also as the means of obtaining money to lay by, naturally suppose that the utmost of my ambition must be so to push on the thriving trad-

as to ſwell the proceeds to a plum; who, from obſerving, that amongſt Courtiers and Politicians, a forwardneſs to claim their due is ſeldom a quality in which they are wanting, have imagined, that, though the regiſter may have produced ſome effect, the effect is to be aſcribed to the ſubject of its panegyric, and not to the talents of its author; who aſcribing my reſpectful deference for birth and ſtation, not to the operation, upon my mind, of a fixed, and frequently declared political principle, but to a due and becoming ſenſe of inferiority in one born for nothing elſe but to honor and obey; if there be any perſons, who from all, or from any of theſe premiſes, have drawn ſuch a concluſion; if they have hitherto regarded me as one of thoſe political ſilkworms, who, in the emphatical deſcription of SWIFT, are content to ſpin out their exiſtence in the weaving of robes for beings of a ſuperior order, ſuch perſons may, for aught I ſhall aſſert to the contrary, have formed a correct eſtimate of my talents and my worth; but certain I am that they have egregiouſly miſtaken my views."

LONDON FASHIONS FOR SEPTEMBER.

Morning Dreſs.—An emigrant mob of embroidered muſlin, lined with pale pink, pea green, or ſtraw colour, ornamented on the left ſide with a bow of narrow ribbon, the ſame colour as the lining, and trimmed round with a quilting of broad edging or blond lace. A long ſleeved dreſs of ſtriped muſlin or leno, lined with pink, green, or ſtraws to correſpond with the cap, buttoned down the front, and made huſſar faſhion over the boſom: a double ruff, extending only from ſhoulder to ſhoulder, of pale pink muſlin, or otherwiſe, to correſpond with the reigning colour of the dreſs; ſhort gloves, and ſhoes of pale ſtraw.

For Full Dreſs.—A ſhort dreſs of ſilver muſlin, ſpangled (to imitate geranium leaves,) round the bottom; or a long robe of pink crape: a petticoat of white ſarſnet, embroidered with pink geranium leaves round the bottom; the head ſurrounded with a wreath of budding moſs roſes, or early violets, or otherwiſe a tiara of gold, topazes, or pearls; the boſom and ſleeves to correſpond with the embroidery round the bottom of the dreſs; ſhoes of white ſatin; lace armlets, and white kid gloves.

General Obſervations.—Blond and French laces are chiefly worn, and even thoſe but little, till the rage for mock lace, among the lower order, ſhall have ſubſided;—meantime, ſome daſhing fair ones adopting the Pariſian coſtume, wear a border of artificial roſes round the bottom of their dreſſes; and in lieu of lace let in before, a tranſverſe wreath of flowers. They do not, however, court notoriety to the ſame exceſs as the fair Pariſians, for, unlike them, they do not wear long chemiſes bordered with artificial flowers, or trowſers ſurrounded with myrtle, or vine leaves, fully diſplayed to the beholder by jupes, purpoſely ſhortened. Indian ſhawls are, for the preſent, laid on the ſhelf, and the indefatigable faſhion-mongers have introduced an elegant kind of thing inſtead, compoſed either of camel hair, or grogram, and bordered with gold or ſilver, with ſuperb taſſels of a ſpherical form of gold or ſilver likewiſe at each corner; ſome have a beautiful ſpecies of clouded ſilk, with ſilver bordering; ſome white ſatin, ſome pale azure; they are either ſquare, or in form of a ſcarf; in either caſe, their borders and taſſels are their ſplendid recommendation; and from the taſteful, beautiful, and fanciful effect they give to even the moſt elegant dreſs, we are thus minute in deſcribing them.

Parisian Fashions.

A wreath of flowers upon a ſmall cap, brought ſo low as nearly to touch the eye-brows; behind, it ſhows above the roots of the hair; of late they wore large head-dreſſes, bunches of flowers, either lilacs, double hyachints, or roſes; now it is reckoned more elegant to have them ſmall. When a cap has taſſels, they likewiſe bring it almoſt over the eye brows; taſſels of pearl are in the greateſt favour, provided they ſuit the cap; pearls are worn for ear-rings, for necklaces, &c. Sometimes they form a collar for the throat; ſometimes collars of ſmall gold chains are worn, from which depends a locket, a watch, or a croſs.

The gloves are worn extremely ſhort, a gown of crape with ſatin ſleeves, and the body made as a corſette of ſatin likewiſe.

The pocket handkerchiefs for the men are of Lyons ſilk, of different colours and deſigns; at firſt, all of them were crimſon, or brown, with large yellow flowers; now they are purple, ſhot with lilac, or blue, covered with little ſtars or dots; the griſſets wear their handkerchiefs round their necks.

On Saturday Le Bois de Boulgone, which is the only place where women of faſhion will appear on foot, preſented an innumerable quantity of beautiful females; here we obſerved frocks of clear muſlin, worked all round, and faſtened behind as the children have them; ſtraw hats, with bunches of lilac, and ſince the ſwans-down tippets have began to diſappear, the ladies univerſally diſplay the nape of their necks.

Hats of pale ſtraw, with immenſe projecting fronts, and quite low over the ears, cut ſquare behind, and totally without ornament, the better to diſplay the bare nape of the neck, are the moſt in vogue among ladies of all descriptions, the gay as well as the modest. Large bunches of ribbon are prefixed to the sides, and it is necessary to have the ends so long, that they float before the eyes.

Scarfs are universally worn over the dresses, which consist for full dress, usually of pink crape, bordered with flowers; and for half dress, clear muslin with ribbon puffed all round, and even crossed all over to resemble net work; trimmings of pearls, flowers, and even straw, are alternately the rage.

Journal de Paris, August 8.

Singular Anecdote of TIMOTHY BRECKNOCK, who was executed at Castlebar, in Ireland, with G. R. FITZGERALD, ESQ.

In the year 1758, a man, committed to Newgate on a charge of highway robbery, sent for Mr. Brecknock, and requested he would undertake his defence. When Timothy came to him, his first question was, whether he had really committed the robbery or not; "it is no matter whether you have or no," said Brecknock, "you shall not be hanged; but it is necessary I should know the truth, that I may frame the defence accordingly." "Why indeed," replied the culprit, "I did commit the robbery." "VERY WELL," answered the SOLICITOR, "now tell me first, have you any money?—How much can you command?" "I have somewhat above 100l. in cash and valuables." "Very well, let me have 80l; it is not for myself; I leave my reward to your generosity, when you are cleared; but I want that money for a particular purpose, and will account to you for every farthing of it. There are now five weeks to your trial, so I have time enough; and with time and money every thing can be done."

The sum was instantly given in bank notes, which the culprit had artfully concealed, and Mr. Brecknock proceeded to desire the criminal to give him a particular account of every circumstance of the robbery; which he did to the following purport:

That five weeks before that time, he met a gentleman in a chariot with a footman behind, near the nine mile stone on the Barnet-road, at half past eleven at night; that he stopped the carriage, and robbed him of 137 guineas, and some silver, but refused his watch, as he did not choose to deal in discoverable articles; that presently after, he found himself pursued by the coachman on one of the coach horses, and rode down a lane out of the high road, but finding the lane close at the bottom, he leaped his horse over some pales, and quitting him, took to his heels across the fields, and got safe to town; that the coach horse not being able to leap, his own horse had got clear, and came home of itself next morning. Thus he thought himself quite safe as to this affair; but that shortly after, the gentleman's coachman met him on the same horse in Whitechapel, had him seized and carried before a magistrate, where his person was identified by the gentleman, the coachman, and the footman, who knew him by the bright moon-light, on this evidence he was fully committed for trial. "This is rather an ugly affair," said Brecknock; however, don't fear, I'll bring you off; I shall not attempt to prove you elsewhere at the precise time of the robbery; for an alibi is a very dangerous defence, unless it can be well supported; and I don't care to trust your life to a set of rascally witnesses, who may be sifted by a close cross-examination, or have their characters enquired into?—no, no, I shall act otherwise, you have only to make your heart easy, and plead not guilty."

At the next sessions the trial came on, and the gentleman, the coachman, and the footman, deposed to every circumstance of the robbery, as above related; adding, that they were positive both to the horse and the man, whose face they had closely seen by the light of the moon, as his crape had fallen off when he first stopped the chariot, and the coachman had picked it up, when he unharnessed one of the coach horses to pursue the robber, by his master's permission.

The prisoner was called upon to make his defence, when Mr. Brecknock addressed the court in these words:—

"My Lords, and gentlemen of the Jury,

"I have not the least doubt of the innocence of the unhappy person at the bar, though he stands here under very disagreeable circumstances. Inasmuch that although he was in bed, in his own lodgings, at the very time the robbery is said to have been committed, yet he can prove that fact by no other testimony than that of his wife (and I know how little regard is usually paid to a wife witnessing for her husband,) and of a child of five years old, who is too young to be admitted to an oath. I do not seek to impeach the veracity of the gentleman who is the prosecutor; his character is too well established. I have not the least doubt he was robbed in the manner he has sworn; neither would I contend that the coachman did not pursue the robber as he has declared; yet I am confident that the prisoner at the bar was not the person. In respect to the identity of the horse, I put that entirely out of the question, and will say, that a horse seen in the dark cannot be easily known in the light, at a distance of five weeks. There is scarcely a horse so singularly marked, as not to have others similarly marked; and, as a proof, there are now four horſes I have cauſed to be brought into the court-yard, ſtanding together with the priſoner's horſe, which Mr. Sheriff has been ſo kind as to ſuffer to be brought hither; and, if the three witneſſes agree in ſelecting, ſeparately, the priſoner's horſe, of which they are ſo very certain, from the reſt, I will acquieſce in the priſoner's guilt. But, my Lords and gentlemen of the Jury, I have ſtill more to urge, in reſpect to the alledged identity of the horſe; the proſecutor is, doubtleſs, impelled by a love of juſtice; but that love ſometimes carries a man to an extreme of zeal. The coachman may have a love of juſtice, but when it is remembered that the conviction of the priſoner will entitle him to a reward of 40l. the court may be inclined to think him intereſted in the verdict, which you, gentlemen of the jury, may bring in. The footman having heard ſome particulars ſworn by his maſter and his fellow-ſervant, may believe them true, as being the ſame ſtory. The three witneſſes have all declared that they recollected the priſoner's face, from having ſeen it clearly at the time of the robbery, by the ſtrong light of the moon. Now I have ONE WITNESS that will undoubtedly ſet aſide this concurrence of evidence. It is, indeed, an unintereſted witneſs, a ſilent witneſs, yet one that will ſpeak home to the conviction of the whole court. It is Ryder's ALMANACK; and if your Lordſhips, and the gentlemen of the Jury, will take the trouble to look into it, you will find it utterly impoſſible that the witneſs could have ſeen the robber's face by the light of the moon; for you will ſee, on the night of the robbery, that the moon did not riſe till ſixteen minutes after three in the morning, conſequently it could not give any light at half paſt eleven o'clock, near three hours before it roſe; and if the witneſſes are thus proved to be miſtaken in the capital point of their evidence, no part of it can affect the priſoner." Having ſaid this, he handed an ALMANACK up to the bench, "in which it appeared plainly that the moon roſe on that particular night as Brecknock had ſaid. The court and jury being ſatisfied as to this point, the priſoner was immediately ACQUITTED, and diſcharged out of court, on paying his fees.

MR. BRECKNOCK prided himſelf on his ingenuity in deceiving the court; which, as he afterwards boaſted, he effected in this manner. He had employed the money he had received from the highway-man, in getting printed a new edition of Ryder's Almanack, exactly ſimilar to the genuine edition, except that the luminations for the whole year had been changed, ſo as to make it appear that on the night of the robberry there was no moon. He had only half a dozen of copies ſtruck off, one of which he presented to the bench, and lodged the other five indifferent hands in the court, to be produced in case any doubts had arisen, and another Almanack had been called for. The Recorder discovered the fraud some days after, but it was then too late, as the prisoner had been acquitted, and the Solicitor was not responsible for the error in the Almanack he produced, and which could not then be identified.

La Bagatelle.

(From late English Newspapers.)

It is a curious incident, that when the Americans sent Dr. Franklin, a printer, as Minister to France, the Court of Versailles sent M. Girard, a book-binder, and a man of talents, as Minister to the Congress. When Dr. Franklin was told of it, "Well," said he, "I'll print the independence of America, and M. Girard will bind it."

An Advertisement in an Irish paper begins thus—"To be let for ever, or longer if required."

It appears that the pickpockets infest the avenues to the House of Commons, animated, doubtless, with the general anxiety to raise the supplies in such a manner as shall be scarcely felt.

A Serjeant Mack is now confined on a charge of murdering one of the privates under his command. It seems as if this was a proverbial name for a bad soldier.

One of the earliest Newspapers in London was printed by one Moggridge, an Irishman, who used to rank the intelligence from Yorkshire, under the head of Foreign News.

The Honorable H. Erskine, who has just taken his seat in the House of Commons, being once asked by an old farmer, what was meant by that expression in Scripture, where it was said, "that a certain man was cloathed with curses;"—the witty advocate immediately answered, that it was a habit of swearing he had gotten.

Buonaparte has had many portraits painted of his Consular and Imperial person. It is, however, said, that none have yet done him complete justice: the proper artist has not yet been found to take off his Majesty's head.

It would appear from the repeated rumours in the French Papers, that Rome, and the rest of the territory of the church, will soon be seized by Buonaparte. It is likewise added, that a new Pope will soon be established in another place. His present Holiness will have an opportunity of displaying his Christian disposition, by exercising the virtue of resignation.

When Lady Elizabeth Foster was at Lausanne, in the zenith of her beauty, and the object of very general admiration, the celebrated Gibbon and Tissot were constantly in her train; that such rivals should be jealous of each other is not surprising:—One day Tissot could not restrain himself, but broke out in the following sentence

"Monsieur l'Historien, quand miladi Elizabeth est malade de vos fadaises, je la guerrirai." Gibbon instantly replied, "Monsieur le Docteur, quand miladi Elizabeth est morte de vos recette, je L'IMMORTALIZERAI."—Tissot generously bowed assent to the superiority of the English gallant.

Copied from a Pawnbroker's window in the country:—"To be sold a paire of pistols, that will shute any Gentleman."

An Advertisement for the sale of a farm, in the New Jersey Chronicle, concludes thus:—"It would be an agreeable residence for a Lady, as there is not a ducking-stool within fifteen miles of it."

CHARACTER OF THE CALABRIANS.

The Calabrians are a race, barbarous, wild and revengeful in the extreme. Such is their unsociable disposition, that they prefer living in the open air, like the savages. They pursue their enemies to the entire expiration of their families, not even sparing infants at the breast, and their hatred is bequeathed, as a valuable inheritance, to their posterity. In the frequent wars in which they are engaged with each other, the death of the vanquished is considered as honorable, but natural death they look upon as unfortunate and disgraceful. On such an occasion the women and children deplore the melancholy event.—"Was there," say they, "no ball for our husband—for our father? Was he doomed to die, like a despicable citizen, in his bed?" Their women, of whom they are extremely jealous, accompany them, armed, in their warlike excursions, and fight by their side with incomparable intripidity. They respect no laws, and hold their magistrates in supreme contempt. If severity be sometimes employed, and attempts be made to take offenders into custody, they betake themselves to the woods, where they live by plunder, surprising and murdering travellers; nor has any one the courage to attack them in their retreats. In consequence of their superstitious attachment to a religion, with which they are unacquainted, they reverence their priests, who are almost as ignorant as themselves, and blindly obey their commands. Such is the character of the Calabrians, who, on the invasion of Naples by the French in 1799, hearing of the depredations committed by them, of the shameful manner in which they treated the women and girls, and the contempt they manifested for the ministers of religion, unanimously resolved, in spite of their just complaints against their former government, to oppose, with all their might, the entrance of the enemy into their territory. It is well known, how much the exertions of these Calabrians, headed by Cardinal RUFFO, contributed to the subsequent expulsion of the French from the kingdom.

LIGNATOR, OR
THE POETICAL SHIPWRIGHT:

• A SPECIMEN OF THE MODERN EPIC.

THE ARGUMENT.

LIGNATOR, a reſpectable and thriving Ship-builder, unhapily conceives a deſire to become——

" Of fortune and his ſtars in ſpite,——"

an Author.

With the exhilarating auxiliary of the Virginian perfume, and with inſpiring potations from the Coigniac fountains, and further ſtimulated by the ſublimity of a PINDAR and the harmony of a SEWARD, the infatuated " Man of Wood" assumes the Poet's palm, and, all unadviſedly, ſoars into the regions of Parnassus. Here the RECORDER makes a degreſſion, with an elegant and claſſical Apoſtrophe to the Editors of Newſ-papers, Magazines, Journals, &c. &c. roundly intimating that, by their miſtaken complacency in, indiſcriminately, giving publicity to the crudities of every rhyme-ſtruck hero, they, thereby, have kindled the flames of an ignis fatuus, which has, too frequently, proved deſtructive to the more laudable and profitable purſuits of a long liſt of " Would-be Poets. This evil is appropriately illuſtrated by the alluſion to a man who had learned to write, being executed for forgery. Lignator, as a Candidate for the APOLLONIAN WREATH, neceſſarily falls in love. However, as no ordinary beauty would ſerve his turn, ſo, in the true ſpirit of the vis poetica, he addreſſes himſelf to Jupiter. Here the ſublime flight of the " Epic" is manifeſt; whilſt Juno and Minerva, provoked at the inſolent pretenſions of the timber-headed bard, combine to delude this unhappy votary of the Muſes, by ſending him, from Olympus, what he conceived to be a beautiful woman, but what was no other (the etherial miſt being diſpelled) than a "ſhip's figure," enveloped—not with clouds of Olympic amber, but—in a truſs of ignoble ſtraw!

Adverting to the ſmall ſcope, which the RECORDER of this poem uſes for the diſplay of ſcenery and machinery, it is both hoped and preſumed that the learned Critic will not withhold his worth-conferring applauſe upon ſo tranſcendant a ſpecimen of the HOMERIC Muſe:

Aliquando bonus dormitat Homerus.

HOR.

IMITATED.

Critics, be kind to our frail faults we pray,
Since e'en good HOMER dos'd——ſometimes——they ſay.

R.

BY Nantz inſpir'd and with Virginia fum'd,
LIGNATOR firſt the poet's palm aſſum'd;
Verſe following verſe (no matter wrong or right,
Or brok'n or rugged) yielded vaſt delight.
Unhappily, our timber-bard had read
By much too much for his o'er-brandied head;

Wag Walcot's wit and Seward's softer strain
Had tak'n possession of his wood-bound brain;
Those would he imitate, not dreaming once
(God save the mark !) of vacancy of sconce:
Till now no longer reason holds her seat,
He stares a rhyme-struck maniac complete !

Here, Critics, with your leave, here let's digress,
And the high corps of Editors address.
Ye type-crown'd Knights ! ye Oracles ! ye Times!
Heralds and Stars of virtue, vices, crimes,
And the sweet harbingers of unspelt rhimes !
Nor you,—ye Magazines ! with colour'd covers !
Ye Monthly Registers of monthly lovers !——
Be by the muse unsung ;—yet deign to know,
Too oft you've prov'd the'instruments of woe,
For had you ponder'd, with God's fear and grace,
Ere ev'ry rhyming idiot found a place
In your bright pages, —many a fool might pass
For some good handicraft, 'scap'd from Parnass!
So have I seen from that great true depend
(Whence many a hero makes his " cloud-capt" end)
Some hapless youth, whose sire, as 'twere in spite,
Had skill'd, alas ! the luckless boy to write :
Dire lore of ills ! (by ruthless laws decreed)
Behold the penman on a scaffold bleed,
Only because——he counterfeits a deed !

Now for our bard ;——a bard must be in love,
And Venus (tho' flirting with squire Mars above)
Is summon'd to attend with silver dove.

Say, Muse, what charms will thy great Vot'ry suit ?
Ah, verse would faulter, eloquence prove mute ;
No, nothing can describe our Vot'ry's choice,
No, nothing, nothing, but his own sweet voice!
Give me, great Jove, he sung, the boon I crave,
(Since I am nothing but thy godship's slave)
Give me a maid, whose beauteous mein shall vie
With her, whose doves skim through the golden sky ;
It is not much I ask——but let her breast
Be fair as Ida's top, were snows do rest ;
I'd have her eyebrows finely arch'd ; her eyes
(Better proportion'd) of dame Juno's size ;
Her arms and elbows, like Minerva's full,
But unadorn'd with a Gorgon's skull ;
Her waist——(but this her heav'n-ting'd robe should hide,
For Grecian drapery is beauty's pride),
Her waist— with Cytherea's zone be bound,
And no deformity beneath be bound.
Her foot—an arch-turn'd ancle should display,
Whose tripping steps might happily convey
A chearful carriage ; nor o'er grave, o'er gay ;
A blendure of both, a dignity with mirth,
At once, a living PARAGON on earth !

Jove heard astonish'd—yet vouchsaf'd to smile;
Not so Heaven's Beauties, they with female guile,
Provok'd, insulted, in deep concert brood,
How best t' avenge them on the man of wood;
At length Minerva, far for wisdom fam'd,
In her great wisdom this great project schem'd:
A log, (quoth she) I'll deck with beauty's glow;
Enough, ye goddesses! now look below.

She said; Lignator, on his suppliant knees,
Hails the fair gift, and worships heavn's decrees!
The charms exceed by charms what he could crave,
So far immortals mortals can deceive!
Mean while, (and oh that beauty should so spite)
The skies are shook with Momus' broad delight;
Minerva smil'd, titter'd Cytherea's queen;
To cough and sneeze was ox-ey'd Juno seen;
Loud quak'd the firmament, in spite of Jove,
And rain and thunder issu'd from above!
The pealing torrents our great bard molest,
And now behold to crown sage Pallas' jest;
The joy'd Lignator smooths his dull, round face,
And turns him duteously his bride t'embrace.

But, oh, who can the deep amazement tell?
Not all the bards who sung since Ilium fell;
But oh, who can the deep amazement line?
Not all the Painters since Appeles' time;
The Muse then imitates the 'Artist, who
What could not be portray'd, conceal'd from view:
Last then she sings:—a PARAGON instead,
(So illy our Poetic wood-man sped)
A truss of straw he hugs, wrapt round an old Hulk's head!

WILL CLEWLINE.

A BALLAD.

From Jamaica's hot clime, and her pestilent dews,
From the toil of a sugar-stowd bark,
From those perilous boatings that oft thin the crews,
And fill the wide maw of the shark;

From fever, storm, famine, and all the sad store
Of hardships, by seamen endur'd,
Behold poor WILL CLEWLINE escap'd, and once more,
With his wife and his children safe moor'd!

View the rapture that beams in his sun-embrown'd face
While he folds his lov'd KATE to his breast,
While his little ones, tripping to share his embrace,
Contend who shall first be caress'd.

View them climb his lov'd knee, while each tinny heart swells,
As he presses the soft rosy lip;
And of cocoanuts, sugar, and tamarinds tells,
That are soon to arrive from the ship.

Then see him reclin'd in his favorite chair,
With his arm round the neck of his love,
Who tells how his friends and his relatives fare,
And how their dear younglings improve.

The ev'ning approaches, and round the snug fire,
Their little ones sport on the floor;
When lo! while each accent, each glance is desire,
Loud thund'rings are heard at the door.

And now like a tempest that sweeps through the sky,
And kills the first buds of the year,
Oh! view midst this region of innocent joy,
A gang of fierce ruffians appear.

They seize on their prey, all relentless as fate,
He struggles—is instantly bound;
Wild scream the poor children, and lo! his lov'd KATE
Sinks pale and convuls'd to the ground!

To the hold of a Tender, deep, crowded and foul,
Now view the brave seaman confin'd;
And on the bare planks, all indignant of soul,
All unfriended behold him reclin'd!

The childrens' wild screamings still ring in his ear,
He broods on his KATE's poignant pain;
He hears the cat hauling—his pangs are severe;
He feels—but he scorns to complain.

Arriv'd now at Plymouth, the poor enslav'd Tar,
Is to combat for freedom and laws;
Is to brave the rough surge in a vessel of war;
He sails and soon dies in the cause!

KATE hears the sad tidings, and never smiles more,
She falls a meek martyr to grief;
Her children, kind friends and relations deplore,
But the Parish alone gives relief!

CHARITY SERMON.

On Sunday the 1ſt February, a Charity Sermon was preached in St. Mary's Church, Fort St. George, by the Reverend Doctor Kerr, Senior Chaplain, for the benefit of the poor of the Monegar Choultry; at which about two thouſand paupers are daily fed. The collection on the occaſion amounted to about 1000 pagodas.

Madras, January 31, 1807.

ADDRESS TO THE INHABITANTS OF MADRAS.

At the preſent awful period, when, in conſequence of a failure of the periodical rains, the Carnatic is threatened with all the horrors of famine, and the wretched Inhabitants, deſtitute alike of employment and ſuſtenance, are flocking for ſuccour to Madras; an ardent deſire muſt be excited in every humane breaſt of contributing to the prevention or alleviation of ſo dreadful a calamity.

Five and twenty years have elapſed ſince this part of the Peninſula experienced the ravages of famine. At that time a general ſubſcription was opened for the relief of the Native Poor of this Settlement, and it was moſt liberally encouraged as well at Madras, as by the Supreme Government and Inhabitants of Calcutta. A Committee for the appropriation of the money thus ſubſcribed was elected, conſiſting of the Miniſters and Church Wardens for the time being, together with ſome of the moſt reſpectable Britiſh, Portugueſe, Armenian, and Native Inhabitants of Madras. Under the management of this Committee, the Funds of the Charity were applied to the purchaſe of all the grain which could poſſibly be procured. Many thouſands of diſtreſſed Natives found immediate relief, and upwards of 2,000 remained, and for the ſpace of ſeveral months were daily fed at the Monegar Choultry. The whole amount of the Subſcription would then have been expended, could ſuſtenance have been obtained for a greater number of miſerable objects.

When this grievous calamity ceaſed the Committee, determined to apply the balance which remained, in a manner the moſt beneficial, and, next to the original intention, apparently the moſt conſonant to the benevolent views of the Subſcribers. It was reſolved that the intereſt accruing from this ſum ſhould be appropriated to the relief and maintenance of the ſick, the aged, and infirm among the Native Poor; and the principal ſhould be preſerved, in order to be in readineſs to avert the miſeries of famine, ſhould it pleaſe Providence again to afflict this Settlement with ſuch a terrible diſpenſation.

That period, alas! has arrived:—and We, the Committee in whom is now vested the management of the Poor Fund, have deemed it our duty to purchase such quantities and to commission such supplies of Rice, as our Capital and the exigency of the time permits and requires. Since the commencement of the present year, the number of Paupers who have resorted for relief to the Monegar Choultry, have increased from 150 to upwards of 1,800; independently of 200 whom it is the intention of Government to employ on works of public utility. Our Capital on the 31st December 1806, amounted to Pagodas 18,343, 26, 49, consequently, to relieve a greater, or even long to maintain the present number of supplicants, is beyond the ability of the Fund.

Urged by the imperious call of hunger, thousands of wretched objects will crowd to the presidency, in hopes of finding that relief which their former places of residence could not afford. We trust that their reliance on the benevolence and liberality of this settlement will not be misplaced. An exertion of generosity, and in such a cause, once in twenty five years, cannot be deemed oppressive. We, therefore, feel a firm persuation that the subscriptions now solicited will be worthy of that character for humanity and munificence which this settlement has long maintained, and prove commensurate to the extensive evil to the relief of which they are intended to be applied.

As the old fund will probably be soon exhausted, we propose, as soon as the present subscription is closed, to call a meeting of subscribers, in order to elect a committee for the management and appropriation of the new contributions.

G. M. TASWELL, Esq.

Colonel Taswell is requested to take the Chair of President.

Read the Proceedings of the former Meeting of the 27th December 1806.

The Agent lays before the Meeting the several Applications made to him from different Persons desirous to become Subscribers to the Institution. Resolved that their names be enrolled in the List of Subscribers according to their Classes.

Resolved that as it is desirable to know, as early as possible, the extent of Subscribers who may wish to become members of the Society, the following advertisement be inserted in the different Public Papers at this Presidency.

"A further Number of Subscribers being requisite to form a sufficient fund for "establishing the Institution, the Committee of the Madras Annuity Society re"quest those persons who are desirous to become Subscribers will send their ap"plication, to the Agent's Office before the 31st of March next."

The Counsel and Solicitor, fully sensible that a reduction in the Expenditure of the Establishment will essentially promote the Public utility afforded by the Madras Annuity Society, relinquish the allowance proposed as an annual retaining fee of Two Hundred and Fifty Star Pagodas.

The Agent impressed by the same sentiments, proposes, a Reduction in his Monthly Allowance of One Hundred Pagodas: fully sensible that should the Institution extend considerably in its beneficial operations, the Directors will take into their consideration the encreased attentions required in the Management of the affairs of the Society.

The Agent further proposes that the Monthly Allowance of One Hundred Pagodas be borne by the different Classes in the following Proportions, Pagodas 40 by the 1st Class; Pagodas 30 by the 2d Class; Pagodas 20 by the 3d Class; and Pagodas 10 by the 4th Class; and that the Monthly Allowance of 20 Pagodas for an Establishment of Native Servants be borne in the same proportion by each Class, that is Pagodas 8 by the first, Pagodas 6 by the Second, Pagodas 4 by the Third, and Pagodas 2 by the Fourth Class.

It having been suggested by several Military Gentlemen that the Junior part of the Army on this Coast would be induced to become Subscribers to the Madras Annuity Society, were a further time allowed for the Completion of the Subscriptions due on admission, Resolved that two Years be fixed for that purpose, and that the following Advertisement appear in the public Papers.

" As it may be found inconvenient to some Subscribers to pay in the course " of the first year, by the Quarterly Instalments mentioned in the Regulations, " the Amount of Subscription due on Admission, Notice is hereby given that in " such cases where an extension of term may be required, twelve months more " will be allowed for Payment of the arrears of Subscription, which may not " have been paid in the course of the first year, an Interest of 12 per cent. per " Annum being charged on such delayed payments from the quarterly periods " fixed by the 8th regulation."

Resolved that a Subscription Book be sent in Circulation at the Presidency, for such Persons to inscribe their names therein, who may be desirous to become Members of the Society; and that Subscription Books be forwarded to Out Stations for the same purpose. The Right Honorable the Governor having signified his permission, that Subscriptions for the Society be received at the Government Bank, Resolved that Subscribers pay into the Government Bank the amount of their Subscriptions, when called for either in Company's 8 per Cent. Paper at Par, or in Money, at their option: and upon producing a Check from the Cashier of such payment having been made, a regular Receipt for the amount will be given, signed by the Chairman and Deputy Chairman.

Resolved that all Subscriptions be paid with Interest at 12 per Cent. per Annum from the quarterly periods mentioned in the 8th Regulation.

Several Officers in the Honorable Company's Army, having expressed a desire to become subscribers, were it permitted to them to transfer to the Society their claims upon Government for Off-reckonings, Bazar Allowances, &c. in payment of their Subscriptions, Resolved that an address be presented to the Right Honorable the Governor in Council, to solicit his favorable consideration to some arrangement being adopted to enable such Officers to make a transfer of their Claims in payment of the Subscriptions required upon their admission as Members to the Madras Annuity Society, Resolved that the present proceedings be published in the different Papers of the Presidency for general information. Resolved that when a sufficient number of Subscribers have offered for the different classes, a General Meeting of them be convened, in order to elect the Directors for the year and commence the operations of the Madras Annuity Society.

MADRAS SHIPPING INTELLIGENCE—Feb. 2.

On Saturday last arrived the ship Mungamah, Captain J. Fraser from Tappanooly the 9th, but last from Analabe the 16th ult.—Passengers.—Mark Roworth, Esq. W. D. Brodie, Esq. and Messrs. Earl, Finlayson, Allen and Wailes, (Prisoners of War on Parole.)

On the same day arrived the brig Chunderdeep, Captain A. Demetrius from Backergunge, the 12th ultimo.

On the 1st Instant arrived the brig Despatch, Captain John Browne, from Calcutta the 7th, and Vizagapatam the 25th Ult.

Passengers.—Messrs. Robert Inverarity and Douglas Murray.

The brig Despatch on her passage from Calcutta experienced a fresh breeze from the S. W. on the 13th Jan. This encreased to a heavy gale on the 18th, and on the 19th the wind chopped round to the N. W. with heavy lightening—On this day the vessel was struck by lightening, off the Black Pagoda, which shivered the Top-gallant-mast, Top-mast and Main-mast into splinters, and fell into the forerigging, by which the foremast was sprung severely, about 6 inches above the forecastle—By this accident one of the Seacunnies was dreadfully wounded, with 7 or 8 of the crew.—The sea broke over the vessel in all directions, so that the crew were obliged to keep both pumps at work, the vessel straining and piching very much, and latterly they were obliged, for the preservation of their lives, and of the vessel, to heave overboard about 270 bags of grain.

At the commencement of the gale four pattamars were in company, but afterwards two only were to be seen.

The Despatch was obliged to come too, off the Black Pagoda, in 12 fathoms water, to secure the masts—they anchored at Vizagapatam on the 25th, and sailed again the same day, in prosecution of their voyage to Madras.

On their passage up, they passed several pattamars, which had lost their top-masts, and bowsprits.

The ship Helen, Captain Allen, arrived in the roads on Sunday last, from Columbo the 7th, and Point de Galle the 8th Ult.

Passengers.—Lieut. Prendergast, Mr. George Dalrymple and Mrs. Flower and family.

The American ship Elizabeth, captain Thompson, and brig St. George, captain J. Matthew, arrived in the roads on Monday last—the former left Calcutta the 18th ult. and the latter from Ganjam the 14th ultimo, and on her passage touched at Masulipatam, from whence she sailed on the 28th.

The following vessels have been recently captured, by the Enemy's ships of war and privateers, on the West Coast of Sumatra.

The ship Admiral Rainier—brig Jane, and the Grab Nancy—On the latter vessel Mr. Roworth was passenger, and was put on board the brig Mungamah, one of the captured vessels, which was liberated, and is now in the Roads.

PROCLAMATION.—Fort William, the 18th December, 1806.

" Whereas instances have occurred of masters of ships, placing themselves under convoy of His Majesty's ships of war, disobeying, to the great injury of the Public Service, and of individuals, the orders which they have received from the Commanding Officers of the convoy, the Honorable the Governor General in Council. in order to prevent as much as possible an occurrence of such practices, is pleased to publish the following orders, to take effect from this date.

1st—All masters of ships, belonging to this port, placing themselves under convoy of any of His Majesty's ships of war, are required strictly to conform to the orders which they may receive from the Commanding Officer of such convoy.

2d—On a report being made, to this Government, on the part of the Commanding Officer of the convoy, that any masters of such ships have, without orders, separated from his convoy, an enquiry will be immediately instituted into the conduct of such masters, and unless satisfactory proof of the necessity of their separating from the convoy can be shewn, such masters will be considered to have contravened the orders of Government, and to have forfeited the protection of the Honorable Company, and will be ordered by the Government to quit India."

Calcutta.—January 14, 1807.

The Honorable the Governor General's Body Guard was reviewed on Thursday morning, by the Right Honorable the Commander in Chief, who has been pleased to express his approbation of that Corps, in the following General Orders, by the Right Honorable the Commander in Chief, January 8, 1807.

" The Commander in Chief has much pleasure in expressing the satisfaction he received at the inspection this morning of the Body Guard, of the Honorable the Governor General.

The correct performance of the sword exercise, and expertness displayed by the Native Officers and troopers, in the use of the sword and management of their horses, whilst skirmishing; the prompt and correct changes of position, and the firm and rapid charges, in division and in line, evinced a degree of perfection in the discipline of this well appointed Corps, which is highly creditable to all the Officers and men composing it, and affords the pleasing testimony that Captain Gall, as Commandant, is deserving of the situation he has the honor to fill.

Calcutta Supreme Court.

Paniotty v. Atkinson.

This was an action for the recovery of damages from the Defendant, an assistant surgeon, for criminal intercourse with the plaintiff's wife. The damages were laid at 30,000 Rupees. The cause came on for trial on Saturday last. The fact of the criminal intercourse was clearly established, but the circumstances in extenuation, arising chiefly from the incontinency of the plaintiff's wife, were such, that the Court in giving judgment against the defendant, assessed the damages at one Rupee.

In adverting to the subject of this trial, we are led to remark, that the Hindoos, more particularly those of Bengal, follow in similiar cases, a very different course; and which they think not perhaps without reason, better suited to the correction of human frailty, and certainly more consonant to good morals, and to the general interests of society, than that of resorting to Courts of Justice for legal satisfaction, according to the prevailing practice of European nations, or more strictly speaking of the English, who have more actions of this description, in twelve months, than all Christendom besides in half a century.

In cases of female infidelity among the Bengalese, the frailty of the wife, far from subjecting her to the forfeiture of her husband's protection, only invests him with a fit opportunity for the exercise of his conjugal authority. He accordingly proceeds without ceremony to apply the rod of correction, to subject the faithless fair to solitary confinement, and to deprive her of any other sustenance than rice and water. This harsh though salutary discipline, is continued a shorter or longer time, and with more or less rigour, according to the degree of criminality, according to the symptoms of penitence manifested by the culprit, and according to the influence of various causes on the mind of the husband. The offence, which is properly regarded as a private and domestic misfortune, is never made the subject of public conversation, and the knowledge of it is anxiously concealed, by the individuals of the family, who considering themselves as in some measure involved in the reproach that attaches to it, have sufficient prudence and sagacity to conceal their disgrace.

That the offence can in this way more than in any other be fully expiated, we are not inclined to maintain, but according to this practice of the Hindoos, the effects of the example are not thrown upon Society, a consideration of the utmost importance. The publicity given to the crime, according to the English mode of procedure, is, we have no doubt, among the chief causes of its increase in modern times. Every fresh example brought before the public, has a tendency to diminish the horror with which the mind first views the crime; and hence in public morals, it is not more necessary to withstand the principle and practice of vice, than to deprecate its example; for the manners and character of the great mass of mankind, are formed chiefly from imitation,—more the result of example, than arising from the influence of principle.

On the night of the 26th ultimo a fire broke out on the premises occupied by Mr. Nix, in Entally, which almost instantaneously consumed the stable, and other out offices, and we are sorry to say that, two horses, a buggy, palanquin, &c. &c. were destroyed by this accident: which is supposed to have happened, through the carelessness of a Syce, leaving a light burning in the stable. This incident, we hope, will caution gentlemen against trusting their property in straw buildings.

Extract of a letter from Mutra, dated December 19, 1806.

"General Sir Ewen Baillie, has inspected all the corps here, and from the bustle and exercise going forward, we may expect, at the close of the season, some brilliant reviews.

"The ground in the Doab, is quite covered with grain, and a most promising crop may be expected. Our bazar continues remarkably well supplied, with every article of country produce, owing to the great efforts of our brigade major, who is most indefatigable, in his exertions, to keep it in order.

"Gram, although we have three regiments of cavalry here, is still sixty seers, per rupee, and other grain in proportion."

To Lieutenant-colonel MADDISON, Commanding H. M. 65*th Regt.*

SIR,

Understanding that you are soon to leave the 65th regiment, in which you have served for upwards of twenty-seven years. We deem it a duty and we feel it no less a pleasure, before you depart, than to express the high and grateful sense we entertain of the benefits which have been derived from your unwearied zeal, and persevering endeavours, to promote and maintain the good order, discipline, and general respectability of the Corps.

Permit us to offer you our sincere and anxious wishes, that you may enjoy in health, repose, and happiness, the remainder of a life, so great a portion of which, has been passed among us in the practice of every public duty, and social intercourse, which could render you valuable to the service, and to the corps as an Officer, and endeared you to all your Brother Officers as a friend.

We request in the name of all the officers of the 65th regiment, your acceptance of a piece of Plate of the value of one hundred guineas, which we have requested Captain Bates to present to you, on your arrival in England, as a small testimony of their respect, affection, and esteem, with which we have the honor to remain,

SIR,

Your most obedient and humble servants,

ANSWER.

To Major GARSTIN, and the Officers of the 65th Regiment.

GENTLEMEN,

In replying to the very flattering address which has been presented to me this day from the Officers of the 65th regiment, I cannot but feel the highest gratification—Conscious that my intentions have ever been to promote the general good of the regiment, and to deserve, rather than to court, the esteem and respect of the officers under my command; in perusing your address I feel the strongest proof of my success; as it constitutes the greatest pride that I wish to boast—I shall with much satisfaction accept the very handsome token proposed to be presented to me by the officers of the regiment, nor can I take leave of those who have for so many years borne their part in promoting the system of good order, discipline and interior œconomy of the regiment; without expressing my gratitude for the interest, and zeal, with which they have ever supported me in the execution.

That the same spirit may continue to actuate every Member of the corps, and prosperity, unanimity, and success be the never failing attendants of it, be assured gentlemen is, and will ever be the most earnest wish of my heart. These feeling are too natural I trust to be doubted when proceeding from one whose attachment to the regiment has been shewn, and proved, by a service of upwards of twenty-seven years; during which period I have followed it's fortunes into every quarter of the globe, but which I am at length called upon, though with extreme regret, to relinquiſh, by the moſt urgent and preſſing reaſons. And I have the honor to remain with the trueſt ſentiments of eſteem, affection, and regard,

GENTLEMEN, your very faithful and obedient ſervant,

GEORGE MADDISON.

SESSIONS OF OYER AND TERMINER,—Bombay, Jan. 14, 1807.

On Wedneſday the 7th January, the Quarterly Seſſions of Oyer and Terminer were opened by the honorable Sir James Mackintoſh, Knight, and his aſſociates Paul Shewcraft, Eſq. Mayor, and Patrick Hadow, Eſq. Alderman, when the following Gentlemen were ſworn in of the Grand Jury.

William Crawford, Eſquire, Foreman.

John Williams, Eſq.	Wm. Mainwairing, Eſq.	Jonathan Michie, Eſq.
John Smee, Eſq.	J. G. Remmington, Eſq.	Levi Philips, Eſq.
James Falconar, Eſq.	John Leckie, Eſq.	Thos. Dade Beaty, Eſq.
Luke Aſhburner, Eſq.	John Pavin, Eſq.	Captain Charles Jones,
Edward Naſh, Eſq.	Michie Forbes, Eſq.	Patrick Gardner, Eſq. &
William Maughan, Eſq.	Thomas Malcolm, Eſq.	George Barnes, Eſq.

The honorable the recorder having ſhortly ſtated the nature of the crimes which the calendar contained, the grand jury retired, and ſoon after returned with a true bill againſt Julal ſyrang, Ruſeek tindal and Kuſſab and Munnoo, laſcars, being part of the crew of the Daniſh brig Lagarta, for an aſſault on board that veſſel, while proſecuting her voyage on the high ſeas, about 50 miles diſtance from Bombay. The priſoners were found guilty, but in conſequence of ſome favourable circumſtances in the caſe of Munnoo laſcar, the jury recommended him to mercy. The honorable the recorder immediately ſentenced Julal ſyrang, to 6 months hard labour in the docks of Bombay, with a label on his breaſt in the native languages, deſcriptive of his offence; and Ruſeek, tindal, and Kuſſab laſcar to the ſame puniſhment, for 4 months, Munnoo from the regard paid to the jury's recommendation, was diſmiſſed after a ſuitable admonition, on entering into a recognizance to keep the peace.

The grand jury having likewiſe found a true bill againſt Maujee Cheriah for murder, he was placed at the bar; but it appearing that he was a Muſſulman and not a Hindoo, as deſcribed in the indictment, Mr. Threipland moved to quaſh the proceedings, which being aſſented to as of courſe, another bill was immediately found againſt the ſame perſon; his trial upon which comes on, next Monday at 10 o'clock; to which day the court was pleaſed to adjourn the ſeſſions.

On Monday the 12th January, the adjourned Quarter Seſſions again aſſembled at the court houſe, when Maujee Cheriah was put to the bar, charged with the murder of Houcka Mockenjee, on the 1ſt of December, 1806.

Mr. Threipland, company's counſel, addreſſed the jury, and explained that the Coroner's Inqueſt having charged the priſoner with murder, he had been induced to lay an indictment for that offence before the grand jury, but he rather thought from the circumſtances, that the priſoner's crime amounted only to manſlaughter—and that the jury were competent to return that verdict, if they thought from the evidence, that the priſoner was guilty of that crime only.

The evidence for the proſecution and the priſoner having been impartially and minutely inveſtigated; the recorder ſtated to the jury, that on a view of all the circumſtances, he thought the priſoner's crime did not extend beyond manſlaughter—that it did not at all appear that the priſoner had a deliberate intention to commit murder,—the jury without retiring brought in a verdict of manſlaughter.

Sentence on Maujee.

The recorder obſerved that there were circumſtances in the priſoner's caſe favourable to him as far as reſpected the indictment and that the court would have pronounced a milder puniſhment, on him, if he had not attempted to defend himſelf by perjury; that the court was bound to mark its ſenſe of that attempt and ſentenced him to 12 calendar months impriſonment in the town goal.

Salla Mahomed Fazell, was indicted for having on the 20th June laſt, offered to lieutenant Samuel Goodfellow of the engineers and aſſiſtant to the ſuperintending engineer at Bombay, twenty gold mohurs to induce him, not to repreſent to the military board, the failure of Salla Mahomed Fazell in his contract for ſupplying military materials.

Mr. Threipland, counſel for the company, obſerved, that although there had been no inſtance of a ſimilar crime having been the ſubject of legal cognizance, he was afraid, that it rather proceeded from few perſons being found equally correct and honorable as the proſecutor in this caſe, than that there were few offers of pecuniary gain or undue influence in the diſcharge of public duties.—That a general opinion prevails among the natives that every Britiſh gentleman has his price.—That although this offence is not provided for by the act for preventing the acceptance of presents, he had no doubt of its being a misdemeanor at common law, that the object of the present prosecution, was not to inflict a severe punishment on the defendant, but fully to promulgate the law, and that the natives might be aware that in such offers, they were guilty of a crime.

Lieutenant Goodfellow having been examined and a few words being said by the court, the jury brought in a verdict, guilty.

The Honorable the Recorder prefaced the proceedings by observing, that in giving judgment on Bryan Maguire, at a former Sessions he had adverted to information which had been communicated of atrocious designs intended to be executed by that person, on the day that he received sentence. At the request of the parties most concerned, that subject had been very lately investigated, in a private and unofficial, but satisfactory manner by Mr. Law, a Magistrate of the Court, and a man on whose sense and honor the Recorder placed perfect reliance. He was now most happy that the result of that enquiry enabled him to say, that he utterly disbelieved the information which he had received, and he was anxious, as far as his suffrage could extend, to deliver the parties from all imputation or suspicion of such horrible projects. Whether his original informers were themselves deceived or intended to deceive him, was a question at present neither easy, nor necessary, nor perhaps fit to be determined. It was sufficient that the information appeared now to be false.

The Practice of Vaccination which was introduced into this Island in 1802, and which has since been followed with such success, that above 5000 Inhabitants have been for ever secured against the effects of the small-pox, a disorder which antecedently, annually, swept off many thousands, His Excellency the Governor is sorry to find has not been carried to the same extent in the district of Trincomale that has fortunately taken place in the other parts of the Island—The consequence of which as might naturally be expected, has been, and is at present there, that many individuals are failing daily sacrifices to this dreadful disorder.

His Excellency the Governor can have no view to interfere with any well founded prejudice of the natives; on the contrary it is a principle with him to respect all prejudices founded either on reason or on ancient practice; but at the same time he feels it a duty incumbent on him where the recent practice introduced has tended in so extraordinary a manner to the happiness and comforts of the Inhabitants of this Island, to give every support to an institution calculated on the one hand to preserve the lives, and on the other to secure the Health of the Inhabitants.

And with this view he directs that Mr. Christie the Medical Superintendant General do forthwith send to Trincomale two of the ablest of the Vaccinators on the Island at an encreased allowance, and that the Agent of Revenue of that District do furnish Provisions when necessary to such of the Inhabitants as may feel inclined to get innoculated with the Cow-Pox; and His Excellency further calls upon all the publick Officers of every kind to make use of every influence in their power, to induce the inhabitants to take advantage of the present opportunity, which has only for its object their health and comfort.

By His Excellency's Command,

(Signed) JOHN RODNEY, Chief Sec. to Govt.

SHIPPING INTELLIGENCE,—Feb. 11.

On Friday last arrived the brig Felicity, captain R. F. Cauty, from Penang, the 15th January;—passenger Mrs. Cauty.

On Saturday last arrived the brig Calcutta, captain J. Bellinger, and sloop Industry, captain E. Dolby;—the former from Calcutta the 29th, and the latter from Ganjam the 30th ultimo.

On Sunday last arrived the ship Mary, captain Thomas Basden, from Calcutta the 1st instant.

The following are the names of the vessels from China, under convoy of H. M. ship Phæton, which arrived on the 4th instant.

Ship Friendship, capt R. Suxpitch,—Solimany, capt J. Dodd, and Albion, capt. J. Robertson;—passengers per Albion, Messrs. A. Pareira, D'Almeida, Winter and Smith.

By one of the passengers we learn, that Rice was exceedingly dear at Manilla, eight dollars per bag; bread was likewise dear in proportion.

Calcutta, January 16, 1807.

On Saturday accounts were received in town of the arrival in the river of the following ships, from China, whence they sailed the 25th November:

Anna, captain Scott,	Maria, capt. Franks,	Eliza, capt Sparks,
Gunjava, — Purvis,	William, — Angus,	& Mary, — Basden.

On the Maria, came captain Perkins, late commander of the Vulcan, who confirms the account of the loss of that ship, in the China seas: and of their providential escape from destruction, by the Trafalgar falling in with them, when they were momentarily expecting to perish.

It appears, there was a severe typhoon in the China seas, on the 19th October, in which the Fort William, (since arrived in China) was in imminent danger; for although every prudent precaution had been timely taken to guard against the effects of the expected storm—such was its violence, that every sail was blown from the yards and out of the bolt ropes; and they had nothing to depend upon but some tarpaulins spread in the shrouds, to keep the ship's head to the ſea—had the gale continued a very few hours longer, the ſhip muſt have been inevitably loſt on the Coaſt of Luconia.

The Fort William ſubſequently fell in with the Eliza Anna, which had ſuffered much in the gale, and afforded her ſuch aſſiſtance as their means enabled them. That ſhip had not arrived at China, by the lateſt accounts from thence, and ſerious apprehenſions were entertained for her ſafety.

The Tay, from Bombay to China, was ſeen after the gale, with her mizen-maſt gone, and otherwiſe in diſtreſs—ſhe likewiſe has not arrived.

The Letitia, Hope, (Berts) and Harriet, were the only other ſhips which had not arrived; and as the latter paſſed Malacca ſo long ago as the 6th September, there is too much reaſon to fear that ſome fatal accident has happened to her.

The Marian, Tait, from China and Eaſtward, is in the river; alſo, an American from Rangoon, which reports a French privateer's being cruizing off that river, and having taken three veſſels, two of them Arabs.

The Hunter, captain Williams, arrived from the Cape of Good Hope, the 15th October.

January 19.

On Friday accounts were received in town, from Ganjam, of an engagement having taken place between two ſhips off Menſurcottah, on the 19th ultimo: the largeſt of the two ſhips came from the ſouthward, and hoiſted Engliſh colours; the other, a low ſhip (did not exhibit any,) came from the northward.—The largeſt ſhip fired a gun, which the other returned: and then ſtood away in a ſouth eaſterly direction, continuing a running fight; the large ſhip in chaſe. The account adds, that theſe veſſele met at 6 a. m. in about twenty fathoms, and diſappeared by 9 o'clock. It was conjectured on the coaſt, that the large ſhip was the Piedmonteſe.

Official advices received in town from Vizagapatam, and dated the 20th ultimo, ſtate that on the morning previous to that date, his majeſty's ſhip Wilhelmina, captain Foote, fell in with, and chaſed a French brig privateer, mounting 18 gun; but ſhe eſcaped, by ſuperior dint of ſailing

The following is a particular deſcription of the privateer above mentioned:—

" A cutter built brig, with a broad ſtern, nine ports on each ſide, and thoſe on the beam very low:—her bowſprit ſteeving very much, ſails much torn:—main maſt, raking aft, fidded royal maſts; ſides painted black, but near the cut-water, white:—two guns on each side forward, apparently intended for low chasers: :—had a ringtail set; and studded sail booms, rigged out on both sides, during the whole time of the chase:—her sails very gallant brown, and the foot of the main top-sail, black;—had a main sky sail set."

The despatches for the Honorable Company's ships Asia and Lord Castlereagh, for the Coast, and the extra ships Euphrates and Sir William Bensley, direct for Europe, were sent off from the Bankshall, on Sunday evening.

The Althea, Richardson, with troops and stores, for Bencoolen will accompany the two ships dispatched for Europe, to the middle of the Bay.

Yesterday morning, accounts were received in town, of the arrival at Kedgeree, of the Jehangier, from China, after an expeditious run of five weeks, having left Macao, on the 14th ultimo.

At the date of the Jehangier's departure no accounts had been received of the ships Eliza Ann, Letitia, Hope, and Harriet. It is apprehended therefore, that these five ships, had foundered in the China Sea, during the severe gale, of the 28th and 29th of Nov.

The Tay, Captain Greig, arrived at China two or three days prior to the sailing of the Jehangier.

The ship Clyde, Captain Burnsides, from Borneo, last from Malacca and Penang, arrived in the river on Saturday last.

Bullion and Gold Dust, to a considerable amount, are imported by the Clyde.

The accounts of the sales of Opium, received from the Eastward, by the Clyde, are unfavourable.—Borneo was so fully supplied with that article, that Capt Burnsides brought from thence, ten or twelve Chests of his Opium, which he sold at Malacca, at 800 dollars per Chest.

A small Danish vessel, named the Governor Bie, came into the river a few days ago, from the Mauritius. She left Port Napoleon on the 27th of November. There had been no late arrival at the Island, from Europe, and there were no articles of local information that can at all interest the public.

FORT WILLIAM, January 17th.

Extract from the Proceedings of the Honorable the Governor General in Council in the Political Department, under date the 12th of January 1807.

" On the occasion of the departure of the Persian Ambassador, and of the consequent dissolution of His Excellency's Guard of Honor the Governor General in Council deems it an act of justice to record the sense which he entertains of the meritorious conduct of Captain H. B. Kelly, in the command of His Excellency's Guard. In discharging the duties of which command, Captain Kelly has manifested a degree of vigilance, prudence, and attention, highly creditable to his character as an Officer, and eminently conducive to the preservation of good Order, under circumstances which rendered the exertion of those qualities peculiarly necessary for the preservation and accommodation of dispute, between the Sepoys and the followers of the Ambassador.

" Ordered, that the preceding Extract be sent to the Military Department, for the purpose of being published in General Orders."

Calcatta, January 22.

Early on Monday morning, the weather which had for ſeveral preceeding days, been cloſe and foggy, with light airs from the Southward and South Weſt, ſuddenly changed; and a freſh breeze ſet in from the Eaſtward. In the courſe of Monday the ſky became cloudy, and towards the evening there was much lightning upon the horizon in the South Weſt. During the night, and early yeſterday morning, there was a heavier fall of rain than has been remembered in Calcutta, at this ſeaſon, for many years paſt

The Wind now ſeems to have ſettled in the North Weſt, which has lowered the temperature ſo much, that the thermometer fell ſuddenly yeſterday morning from 76 to 62°. The rain has proved very ſeaſonable in allaying the prodigious cloud of duſt, with which the principal ſtreets were lately annoyed.

A letter has been received from captain Richardſon, of the Althea, at Kedgeree, ſtating the alarming circumſtance of that ſhip having been in the moſt eminent danger of being deſtroyed by fire; and ſuſpicion exiſts of its having been intentional. By the great exertion of the officers and crew, aſſiſted by thoſe of H. M. ſhips Fox and Macaſſer, the fire was happily extinguiſhed. It is to be hoped, that the perpetrators of this diabolical act, if intentional, will be brought to condign puniſhment.

We are concerned to ſtate that the ſhip Reliance, capt. Sheen, on the night, of the 19th ultimo, whilſt at anchor in Bombay harbour, caught fire, which notwithſtanding every exertion, they could not extinguiſh; the ſhip is now on ſhore, burnt down to the water's edge—we do not hear that any lives have been loſt on this unhappy occaſion, nor have we been able to learn how the fire happened.

Madras, February 20.

MAGNIFICENT FETE AT BRODIE CASTLE.

On Monday Evening the 16th instant, a most splendid entertainment was given at Brodie Castle by the Right Honorable Lady Theodosia Cradock. It was intended as a farewell party to the numerous friends of the Commander in Chief, and his lady; but we are happy to understand their departure for Europe is postponed.

On the road to Brodie Castle, for more than a mile distant from the house, peons were stationed with flambeaux, and troopers paraded, at different intervals—On a nearer approach, the road was lined with lamps placed at about 3 feet distance, which had an appearance of gaiety, and splendour, difficult to be imagined.—The coup d'œil of the house itself exceeded all description; and we were led to imagine ourselves in fairy land, and about to enter one of those palaces of enchantment, that eastern writers have so largely expatiated on—it was one blaze of light—pyramids of coloured lamps decorated the top; and at the entrance, on the sides of the large flight of steps, similar pyramids were placed, and the Grenadiers of H. M. 94th regiment were stationed on either side of the flight of steps, which lead up to the verandah of the castle. The interior accustomed decorations of this splendid mansion, are unnecessary to be enumerated, they were as usual,—and the rooms were filled with a numerous and brilliant assemblage comprising nearly the whole settlement—The dancing was admirable, and particularly the cotillion, by two sets.

This was executed in the first style of elegance, the partners were as follow:

Mr. Cecil Smith,	The Hon. Mrs. Murray,
Mr. Casamaijor, jun.	Mrs Brown,
Capt. Montalambert,	Miss Casamaijor,
Colonel Reynell,	Miss Williams,
Colonel Gillespie,	Mrs. J. Taylor,
Mr. C. Grant,	Miss J. Casamaijor,
Mr. J. Balfour,	Miss Campbell,
Hon. Capt. Maude,	Miss A. Casamaijor.

A pandal was erected for a supper room, and which from the acknowledged taste of the noble hostess, was, as might have been expected, truly elegant; the building was square, with a dome in the centre—the whole was lined with red, interspersed with rich gold ornaments, and carpeted with a rich scarlet cloth—Numerous large and brilliant lustres, with chandeliers coloured and plain, were ſuſpended throughout, with large reflecting convex mirrors, or rather balls, diſtributed in every part of the ceiling.—The ſupper and wines were of the firſt quality; and ices were ſerved up in a complete ſtate of congelation, and were highly approved and reliſhed.

After ſupper a diſplay of fireworks took place on the oppoſite ſide of the water, under the direction of Captain Biſhop.

The fireworks were partly native and partly European; thoſe of the former commenced by a ſignal gun fired from the creſcent of boats illuminated and moored in the river, and opened with an effect which we do not recollect to have ſeen equalled, the various coloured lights produced; the almoſt infinite variety of fantaſtic contrivances in different coloured fire, evince a knowledge of pyrotechny in the natives of this country, not ſurpaſſed by the ſcience of Europeans, and in ſome particular inſtances not equalled.

Among other beautiful effects, that of the numerous rockets that were thrown off in all directions, was particularly ſtriking: a light was contrived to burn under them as they aroſe, and this ſhining on the body of ſmoke each left in its train, formed as it were a retiform body againſt the dark atmoſphere, at once, novel and ſtriking.

A boat traverſed the river in front of the pandal, dropping at intervals into the water, a ſpecies of rocket, which tumbled about, and ſpouted fire in a humorous and whimſical manner, affording apparently much diverſion to the brilliant aſſemblage of rank and beauty collected on the terrace of the pandal.

At the concluſion of the native fireworks, two ſignal guns were fired from the creſcent; which, with the ſurrounding country, appeared inſtantly in a blaze of artificial day. The houſe, octagons and garden of colonel Munro were illuminated in a ſtile of brilliancy and ſplendour, that can only be conceived by thoſe who beheld them.

This illumination laſted about two minutes, and when all again became dark, on a ſmall iſland oppoſite the caſtle the word Farewell appeared in radiant fire, which after the ſpace of about a minute, by the ſpringing of a mine, was blown into the air with a violent exploſion. The effect of this device together with the awful appearance of the mine, afforded a ſcene of ſublime, and almoſt terrific grandeur. Immediately after the exploſion, a flight of european rockets, announced the concluſion of a ſcene which in ſplendour and magnificence of effect we believe as yet ſtands unrivalled.

A full band of musick was stationed in a boat on the water and at intervals played appropriate tunes with great effect.

After the fireworks, the company returned to the Ball-room, where the festive dance recommenced, and was kept up with unabated spirit until a very late hour in the morning, when the numerous and elegant company retired, highly pleased with the scene they had witnessed, and in admiration of the magnificence, and urbanity, of their elegant hostess.

MADRAS EUROPEAN REGIMENT.

"On the 10th instant their new colours were delivered to the Madras European regiment on the general parade at Masulipatam —the following address was made to the corps on the occasion by captain Tichborne.

"Hon'ble Company's Madras European Regiment, his Excellency the Commander in Chief having done me the distinguished honor to direct me to present to you your colours, conformably to the flag of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, I have now the honor to fulfil his commands—The Company's European Infantry have at all times distinguished themselves by gallantry in the field, and under the able conduct of the veterian officer that now commands the northern division of the army, performed the most arduous and important services, atchieved the most brilliant exploits, and acquired the highest reputation, let it be your pride to emulate their actions, and when circumstances shall again require you to meet the enemies of your country, I trust you will stand by, defend, and conquer under these colours, as British Soldiers have been always used to do."

Upper Orphan School, Kidderpore, January 20.

His Excellency the Right Honorable Lord Lake, Governor of the Bengal Military Orphan Society, having signified his intention of visiting the Upper School at Kidderpore this day.

Deputy Governor, the Reverend Mr. Paul Limrick,—Members of the General Management, lieutenant colonel D. T. Richardson, lieut. col. John Garstin, lieut. col. Thomas Salkeld, captain George Downie, captain Anthony Greene, captain Jeremiah Martin Johnson, captain Thomas Dowall, captain Thomas Preston, and John Mackenzie, esq. assembled at the School, between 10 and 11 o'clock A. M. to receive his Lordship.

His Lordship attended by his Staff, arrived at the house at 11 o'clock, and was received at the bottom of the steps at the north front of the house, by the deputy governor and members of the general management, and conducted by them, visited the several apartments allotted to the male and female branches of the institution.—His excellency was pleased to express himself highly gratified by the appearance of the children, whose looks indicated at once contentment and health, by the mode in which they are cloathed, and by the spacious and comfortable accommodations which Kidderpore House affords to its numerous inhabitants.

We have been favored with the following copy of a letter from captain C. Perkins, late commander of the Vulcan, and Mr. Petruce Carrapit, to captain P. Mearing, of the Trafalgar; together with capt. Mearing's reply.

Peter Mearing, esquire, commander of the ship Trafalgar.

Sir,—We the undersigned, for ourselves, and in behalf of the officers and crew of the Vulcan, beg leave to offer you our warmest thanks for the humanity, zeal, and exertions you shewed in saving us from being perished; we cannot reflect upon the event without raising our hands to the merciful providence that sent you to our relief, at a time when despairing of every hope of safety, we had but death before us. Being destitute of adequate expressions to convey to you the sentiments of gratitude our hearts are impressed with, permit us to assure you, that we shall never cease acknowledging your good offices.

Mr. Petruce Carrapit takes the liberty of enclosing you a draft upon Mr. A. L. Barretto, for Spanish Dollars fifteen hundred; trifling as this sum is, he requests you will accept of it, as a tribute of gratitude.

May providence bless you with a long life, and every manner of happiness, are our sincere wishes; and we have the honor to subscribe ourselves, Sir, your most obedient Servants, (Signed) C. Perkins, Petruce Carrapit.

Canton, November 10, 1806.

To Petruce Carrapit, and Christopher Perkins, esquires.

Gentlemen,

I acknowledge the receipt of your letter, enclosing a draft for fifteen hundred dollars. Believe me gentlemen, when I assure you, that far from expecting any remuneration for the assistance it was in my power to afford you when in distress, that I was thankful to providence for having thrown me in the way, and giving me an opportunity to render all the assistance and comfort to you, that I had experienced myſelf, when in nearly a ſimilar ſituation Accept my thanks, and believe me, gentlemen, your moſt obedient ſervant,

Canton, Nov. 22, 1806. (Signed) P. MEARING.

CALCUTTA CIVIL APPOINTMENT,—January 15, 1807.

Mr. Mathew Lumſden, Superintendent of the Honorable Company's Preſs, in the room of Mr. Francis Holſley, reſigned.

Accounts from Calcutta of the 26th Jan. ſtate the capture of the ſhip Betſey, with a valuable cargo, belonging to that port, by Le Manchot, brig Privateer, of 6 guns, and 100 men, in lat. 4. 18 N. near Annalabe, on the Weſt Coaſt of Sumatra. This is the ſame Privateer which ſome time ago took the Henry Addington, on that Coaſt; ſhe had been at Batavia, where ſhe procured an additional number of guns and men, and had returned to make further depredations on the Coaſt.

The late Commander of the Betſey was put on board a Portugueſe ſhip, bound to Bombay, which landed him at Point de Galle the 21ſt of laſt month.

Extract of a letter from an officer,—Mangalore, January 13.

" A fire broke out in the out houses of Major Walker yesterday, at one o'clock, which soon caught his house, and a strong land wind blowing, the flames soon communicated to mine: both houses were burnt down very rapidly, and I had no time to save any thing, except two Horses, and they were with difficulty saved. The clothes on my back are all I am at present possessed of."

Extract of a letter dated on board the William Petrie, Canton, Nov. 5.

" I wrote to you by the ship Cartier, wherein I mentioned, or gave a short account of the typhoon, in which I suffered with the rest. I am now enabled to furnish you with some further particulars of my fate, on this disastrous event.

" On the 29th October, in the morning, the gale began,—was obliged to keep one of the pumps constantly going :—about 11 at night, the gale encreased, with a confounded high sea; the ship made more water, which occasioned me to keep two pumps going.—About 3 o'clock, a. m. the ship all of a sudden, I found would not rise to the waves; I then sent a man down in the pump well, and found five feet water in it,—the ship was actually water logged and sinking fast;—I immediately turned all hands out, that could be spared, and hove several bags of rice overboard :—I do assure you, I had little or no hopes of seeing you or my family —at this critical period all hands were obliged to work to save their lives, two pumps going, and one gang of men bailing out water with buckets in the well; and another gang heaving rice overboard, as the ship was going down as fast as one could conceive: this disaster lasted until twelve at noon, when the gale abated; but we could not keep the two pumps free till 6 in the evening,—all hands at this time were quite exhausted from want of rest. All our linen, &c. got damaged, the sea had no mercy upon us; it came in from the quarter galleries, stern windows, scuttles, as well as down the hatch ways;—there was not the space of an inch in the whole ship, that was not wet.—After this I made the coast of Luconia, near Manilla, and four days after, I got safe into Macao roads :—I was only twelve hours in sight of the coast of Luconia altogether; which is reckoned to be as good a passage, as ever was heard of.

" In the same typhoon, the ships Fort William, Thomas, Trafalgar and Salamody, severely suffered; but am concerned to state, that the ship Vulcan was entirely lost. I think, I have done as much as any other commander did, in bringing the ship, in so perilous a situation, safe into her destined port. I hope my owners and agents, will take into consideration to reward me, for the trouble I have undergone."

Extract of a Letter from Malacca, dated 17th January, 1807.

"Intelligence brought by a prow from Lingin, states, that the brig Brisk, has been cut off by the crew; that they murdered the commander and officers, and blew up the vessel; that six of the men had been secured by Sultan Mahomed, and are to be sent here by the Tartar.

"Captain Anthony Joze de Vasconcellos, commanding the Portuguese ship Indiana, sailed from Manilla on the 7th January, at which time there was a large French frigate hove down and repairing. The Frenchman reported that they had engaged two English frigates, and effected their escape after a severe contest; it was conjectured that the frigate would soon be ready for sea. Her name was unknown, but described as carrying 42 guns."

The above vessel is the Cannonier, who received a drubbing from H. M. ship Tremendous, off the Cape on her way home.

Head Quarters: Northern Division of the Army, Aska, January 24, 1807.—Division Orders by Major General GOWDIE.

Major General Gowdie derived much satisfaction from the very masterly manner in which the 1st Battalion 19th Regiment Native Infantry went through the several Manœuvres this morning at the Review—The general appearance of the Corps, steadiness under arms, precision in formation, and regularity of firing, all merit the highest praise; and it is with the utmost pleasure General Gowdie observes that spirit of harmony between Major Story, and the Officers under his command, which is the surest base for its foundation amongst any body of men.

By order, (Signed) CHARLES ADDISON,
Assistant Adjutant General Northern Division.

Major General Gowdie has lately been employed in inspecting and reviewing the troops in the Northern Division of the Army.

On the evening of the 14th instant, the General presented the colours of the 1st Battalion 21st Regiment Native Infantry, to that Corps. His address, in effect, was animating and productive of enthusiasm among the European as well as Native Individuals of the Corps. We are not acquainted with the particulars of his address on the occasion, but the substance of it was to the following purport—"That he had the pleasure of delivering to them their colours: that in former days, he had the honor of serving a long time in the Northern division of the army, with their fathers and perhaps with their grand-fathers—that from his observance of the state of their discipline and interior œconomy he was convinced that the same spirit of loyalty and unanimity which he had seen so often evinced by their forefathers was still extant in their progeny now before him, and lastly that under such imposing and satisfactory testimonies he felt proud in committing to their guardianship and care the emblems of their own and their Country's honor."

This ceremony being concluded, the General accompanied by his Staff and the Officers of the Corps, retired to the quarters of

Lieut. Colonel Irton, where, over ſome cool Claret, the following Toaſts were given with the animating Huzzas of, Three times Three, after each toaſt—

To the Colours of the 1ſt Bat. 21ſt Regt. N. I.
To Lieut. Col. Irton, and the 1ſt Bat. 21ſt Regt.
To Maj. Gen. Gowdie, and the N. D. of the Army.

This burſt of honeſt zeal and enthuſiaſm eſcaped not unobſerved by the Natives of all ranks in the corps. It inſpired them with an idea of the ſolemnity of the occaſion, and of the light in which Britiſh Soldiers ever look up to their Colours.

MR. SHEWCRAFT'S FETE.—Bombay, January 13, 1807.

On Wedneſday evening the acceſſion of Paul Shewcraft, Eſq. to the Mayoralty of Bombay, was celebrated by an elegant Ball and Supper, given to the Settlement by that worthy Magiſtrate. We have ſeldom witneſſed in this place ſuch a ſcene of gaiety as was exhibited on this occaſion. The ball-room was ſplendidly lighted up and was decorated with a whole length picture of Britannia recording the victories of the departed Hero of the Nile and Trafalgar.

Card tables were ſpread in the adjoining apartments and the Garriſon Band attended and played during the ſupper time and the ſhort pauſes of dancing. The ſupper table was covered with a cold collation, in which nothing choice or delicate that the place or ſeaſon could furniſh, was forgotten. In ſhort, every arrangement was made that could contribute to the convenience and amuſement of the company, and every thing was conſulted that could promote the feſtivity of the evening.

Nearly two hundred perſons were preſent; among whom we obſerved the Governor, the Commander in Chief, Mr. Lechmere, General Bellaſis, Col. Reynolds, with Lady Mackintoſh, Mrs. Lechmere, and the whole beauty and faſhion of the ſettlement; the dancing commenced at ten, and continued with great vivacity and ſpirit till two in the morning, when the company began to break up and retire to their homes, highly gratified with the treat which the taſte and hoſpitality of the worthy Magiſtrate had afforded them.

Lately of a fever, at Prince of Wales Island, Mr. Henry William Ramsay, assistant surgeon on the Madras establishment.
